For Railroad Workers, There Is Nothing "Fair" About The "Fairness In Asbestos Injury Resolution Act"

■■■■■

RAILROAD COMPANIES WANT CONGRESS TO TAKE AWAY YOUR RIGHTS TO SUE FOR ASBESTOS INJURIES

IF the big railroads get their way, Congress will pass S. 1125 -- the so-called "Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act" -- that will do away with some of your injury compensation rights under a federal law known as FELA.

FELA is the only way you can be fairly compensated for a work-related injury or disease. But the railroads want to make it even easier for them to run away from their responsibilities. All because they want to make more money on the backs of their workers, many of whom have suffered greatly from asbestos exposure.

DON'T believe their lies -- there is no asbestos lawsuit crisis in the railroad industry. No railroad has ever gone under because of it. Their large profits are in no danger, even though railroad workers are.

RAILROADS already get a substantial legal break under FELA by not having to pay "punitive damage" awards that other companies might have to pay. Railroads don't need another sweetheart deal at your expense.
